A. Balance Sheet and Share Repurchase

What will happen to the recently issued Novellus senior convertible notes post the transaction?

Since the transaction is being executed as an all-stock transaction, the existing Novellus 2.625% Convertible Notes (the Notes) will be assumed and will remain on Lam Research's balance sheet.

The example below illustrates the dilutive impact of the Notes at an assumed range of Lam Research share prices after closing of the proposed transaction and is subject to the other assumptions listed below. This example is provided for illustrative purposes only, and should not be viewed as an indication or prediction of actual events or share numbers. More information on the Notes and the rights of their holders is available in the Current Report on Form 8-K filed by Novellus with the SEC on May 10, 2011.

When considering the example, please note that we have made the following assumptions:

The Notes are, and the example assumes that they are, net-share-settled. This means that Novellus (or Lam Research after the assumption of the Notes) will be required to deliver to holders, upon any conversion of the Notes, cash for the par value of the Notes ($700 million in the aggregate) and shares representing any in-the-money value. While investors have the right to convert early under certain circumstances, we generally do not expect investors to convert unless the Notes are near maturity (this is permitted after 15-May-2041) or we exercise our right to call the bonds (this is permitted after May-2021). The actual behavior of investors may vary based on their individual circumstances.

The example assumes shares outstanding for Novellus and Lam Research based on the companies' respective September quarter 10-Q filings. Shares underlying options are included on a gross share basis, and are not adjusted using the treasury stock method. The actual number of shares outstanding and shares underlying RSUs and options of each company, and their dilutive impact, will vary depending on the time of measurement.

The example gives effect to the substitution of Lam Research common stock for Novellus common stock upon assumption of the Notes, using the exchange ratio in the proposed transaction of 1.125x.

After giving effect to such substitution, the conversion price of the Notes would be $35.11 per share of Lam Research common stock, with 28.4781 shares underlying each $1000 Note. This would equate to approximately 19.94 million shares of Lam Research common stock underlying the aggregate outstanding $700 million par value of Notes.

The example does not assume that any shares that may be issued upon conversion for in-the-money value in excess of par.
