Cavium Team:

I m very excited that Marvell has signed a definitive agreement to merge with Cavium to create an infrastructure solutions powerhouse.

Our portfolios are highly complementary, and the combined company will be uniquely positioned to offer end-to-end solutions that address the massive and growing demand for data storage, heterogeneous computing and high-speed connectivity.

Over the last few weeks, I have had the pleasure of getting to know Syed Ali and your management team. It s clear that both our organizations are closely aligned in culture, talent and work ethic. Accordingly, I see this announcement as a combination of two great companies, and we will build a single, integrated team that includes leaders from both companies in key management roles.

Both companies also have strong brand reputations with their respective customers, and we will honor these reputations within the new company. While it is still very early, we do intend to create a new, unified company brand, one that captures and communicates the strength of our combination.

This merger is expected to close in mid-calendar 2018. Until then, we need to operate as two separate companies. Even so, I will be traveling to as many Cavium sites as I can for town halls with Syed and Raghiv. Together, we will share our common vision and answer your questions. You will also be hearing regularly from your leadership team as things progress.

Again, those of us at Marvell are so excited to join forces with Cavium, and look forward to getting to know you in the months ahead. Together, we re going to create a new company that s greater than the sum of its parts, accelerate innovation, and help our customers build a better future.

Thanks,

Matt Murphy

President and CEO
