To The Editor:

Jeffrey Sonnenfeld's April 1 article, "Activist Shareholders, Sluggish Performance" misrepresents, cherry-picks, and omits data to present a highly misleading and inaccurate picture of Trian's performance. The fact is that Trian has delivered strong results for our investors, which is why we have approximately $12 billion in assets under management. We have generated a return of approximately 137% net of fees since inception in November 2005, outpacing the S&P 500 by approximately 2,900 basis points (bps). And if you look at the shareholder returns for the Trian portfolio companies on which Nelson Peltz served or serves on the board, from the day we invested until today, they have outperformed the S&P 500 by an average of almost 900 bps annually.

Professor Sonnenfeld's deceptive and selective use of short-term data is most blatant in citing Trian's returns for 2014 and 2012 – but not including 2013. Not only is his 2014 figure wrong (our return was actually 11% net of fees) but he conveniently omits 2013 when we were up 40% net of fees, significantly outpacing the S&P 500.

Professor Sonnenfeld also leaves out necessary context for DuPont's share price performance in recent years. As detailed in our white paper (available at www.DuPontCanBeGreat.com), we believe this performance is largely due to a cyclical recovery and Trian's involvement, not DuPont's earnings – which for 2012, 2013, 2014 and, according to DuPont's guidance, 2015, will all be below earnings in 2011. We do not believe it is a coincidence that the two days of greatest DuPont stock price outperformance versus the S&P 500 under current management since 2009 were the day news first broke that Trian had invested in DuPont (~500 bps outperformance) and the day Trian released its white paper (~500 bps).

Trian takes pride in working constructively with boards and management teams to improve operations and create sustainable long-term shareholder value. That is why we have nominated four highly qualified nominees for election to the DuPont Board at the 2015 Annual Meeting. DuPont can be great again, but it will require eliminating excessive corporate costs, bureaucracy, and management rhetoric – and bringing the highest level of accountability to the boardroom.

Sincerely,

Nelson Peltz	Peter May	Ed Garden
