If so, attach an explanation of the anticipated change, both narratively and quantitatively, and, if appropriate, state the reasons why a reasonable estimate of the results cannot be made.

As of December 31, 2001, we had an accumulated deficit of $61,356,123 and cash on hand of $6,112. Our operating expenses as of December 31, 2001 were approximately $307,410 per month. As of March 31, 2002, we had approximately $18,695 cash on hand. We had been pursuing a business plan that envisioned raising significant additional capital to continue developing and marketing our products. However, sales of our newly released products have been slower than expected and we have not been successful in raising the additional capital necessary to implement our original business plan. We believe that in view of the limited market demand for our products and the change in market conditions that emerging new technology companies have faced since April of 2000, it no longer appears realistic for us to pursue such a comprehensive, capital intensive plan. Consequently, we have reduced projected operating expenses to approximately $65,000 per month, primarily by closing all of our marketing offices and reducing our workforce from 95 to 2 (our Chief Executive Officer and Vice President of Operations).

During the year ended December 31, 2001, we earned revenue in the amount of $118,298 compared to $499,376 for fiscal year 2000. These revenues came primarily from two new customers. We also collected patent licensing revenues from one customer, which were due to us from a licensing contract signed in 1999. During 2000, we introduced our content hosting service, which enabled customers to store their audio and video content on our servers for delivery to their end-users. We discontinued this service in 2001.

Product cost of revenue for 2001 was primarily the cost of further development of our proprietary software product, Burstware(R), including the costs of marketing Burstware(R) to prospective customers. The product cost of revenue recorded for 2000 consisted primarily of the cost of equipment purchased from a third-party, which was resold to a customer in connection with a software sale.

Operating expenses were $3,688,919 for the year ending December 31, 2001, excluding equipment losses and write-downs, as compared to $18,712,381 during the same period in 2000. This resulted in total operating expenses decreasing by $15,023,462 for the year ending December 31, 2001, over the same period in 2000. In 2001, research and development costs were reduced by $4,112,106, as the result of operations being curtailed due to lack of funds.

For the year ending December 31, 2001, sales and marketing expenses were $156,027, as compared to $8,175,525 during fiscal year 2000. Sales and marketing expenses were substantially lower during 2001, due to our greatly reduced operating scope and lack of operating capital. As of April 2, 2001, all remaining sales and marketing staff were laid off, and all remote sales offices had been closed.

For the year ending December 31, 2001, research and development expenses were $188,222 as compared to $4,300,328 during fiscal year 2000. Research and development expenses during 2001 consisted primarily of contract labor expenses incurred for enhancements to and maintenance of our Burstware(R) technology and other operating costs. The decrease for the year ending December 31, 2001 is primarily attributable to elimination of the in-house engineering staff that had previously developed and enhanced our software technologies. As of April 2, 2001, none of the research and development staff remained as full-time employees, and we substantially reduced our product development spending.

For the year ending December 31, 2001, general and administrative expenses were $3,944,273 as compared to $6,236,528 during fiscal year 2000. General and administrative expenses consist primarily of compensation and fees for professional services, and the decrease in absolute dollars is attributable to the substantial reduction in our operations as a result of insufficient funds. We believe that general and administrative expenses will continue at reduced levels for the foreseeable future.

We had net loss from operations of $3,570,621 for the year ending December 31, 2001, as compared to $19,609,984 during fiscal year 2000. This was a 82% decrease for the year ending December 31, 2001, over the same period in 2000. The decreased overall year-to-date loss resulted from the reduced expenditures discussed above.

Total other expense net was $140,013 for the year ending December 31, 2001, as compared to $53,284 for the 2000 fiscal year. The increase in net other expenses was due to a $324,430 loss from the sale of Eagle Wireless common stock.
