a. My understanding of the merger is that ownership of the new company will be divided equally between Towers Perrin and Watson Wyatt security holders. Watson Wyatt s employees own a small portion of the company, while Towers Perrin is completely owned by its principal population, and, accordingly, will have a larger number of shares in the combined company. Will this impact the culture and direction of the new organization?

b. Are we permitted to buy or sell Watson Wyatt stock before the merger is complete? May I advise a friend to invest in Watson Wyatt stock?

c. Have we filed for antitrust clearance in any country other than the United States? If not, do we have a schedule to do so?

d. I noticed that on the June 29 analyst call, a reference was made to $200 million being available to buy back the shares currently held by certain Towers Perrin shareholders who elect to leave the combined company at the time of closing. Please clarify how this $200 million is funded and how the funding is split between Towers Perrin and Watson Wyatt.

a. We've been told that the expected one-time costs for the merger will be about $80 million following closing. Annual savings resulting from the merger are expected to reach $80 million by the end of the third year, which means there will be a short-term drain on the company. To what extent have these costs already been reserved for in fiscal year 2010 accounts by retaining earnings? What impact will this likely have on bonus pool funding for future years?

a. An affirmative shareholder vote obviously is critical to the merger's completion. Once the vote occurs and if it passes are we officially Towers Watson? Are there other things that need to happen first?

2. The Deal

a. My understanding of the merger is that ownership of the new company will be divided equally between Towers Perrin and Watson Wyatt security holders. Watson Wyatt's employees own a small portion of the company, while Towers Perrin is completely owned by its principal population, and, accordingly, will have a larger number of shares in the combined company. Will this impact the culture and direction of the new organization? (NEW Added 22 October 2009)

No. The strategic direction of Towers Watson will be guided by the proposed Executive Committee and ultimately approved by the board of directors of Towers Watson. The proposed Executive Committee already has done extensive planning to define the desired cultural attributes of Towers Watson and will be the primary influence on the culture and direction of Towers Watson.

b. Are we permitted to buy or sell Watson Wyatt stock before the merger is complete? May I advise a friend to invest in Watson Wyatt stock? (NEW Added 22 October 2009)

As a publicly traded company, Watson Wyatt maintains an insider trading policy that is available for review on Insite at <http://insite.watsonwyatt.com/generalcounsel/confidinsidertrading.shtml>. The policy describes when purchases or sales of Watson Wyatt securities may occur. Further, Watson Wyatt prohibits certain groups of people, referred to as designated insiders, from buying or selling Watson Wyatt securities during the quarterly blackout period. This period typically begins at the close of business on the fourth business day of the last month of each fiscal quarter and ends at the opening of the first trading day after the public release of quarterly or annual earnings. Watson Wyatt also may impose a blackout period that extends beyond this period depending on the type of information that has not yet been made available and that we deem as material.

Regardless of whether you are a designated insider, if you possess material, non-public information about Watson Wyatt or Towers Perrin, including material, non-public information about the merger, you may not purchase or sell, nor may you recommend the purchase or sale of, Watson Wyatt securities. While we encourage the ownership of our company's stock, we also do not want you to inadvertently enter into a transaction or recommend a transaction while in possession of material non-public information about Watson Wyatt, the merger or Towers

Perrin.

However, Watson Wyatt employees who participate in the Employee Stock Purchase Program may continue to acquire shares through the program even if they are designated insiders.

c. Have we filed for antitrust clearance in any country other than the United States? If not, do we have a schedule to do so?
(NEW Added 22 October 2009)

We have filed for and received antitrust clearance in the United States, and are currently in the process of seeking clearance with the European Union.

d. I noticed that on the June 29 analyst call, a reference was made to $200 million being available to buy back the shares currently held by certain Towers Perrin shareholders who elect to leave the combined company at the time of closing. Please clarify how this $200 million is funded and how the funding is split between Towers Perrin and Watson Wyatt. (NEW Added 22 October 2009)

Under the terms of the merger agreement, prior to closing, certain Towers Perrin shareholders will be able to elect to sell between 50% and 100% of their shares back to Towers Watson on the day following closing if these Towers Perrin shareholders also agree to leave the firm 30 days after closing. We refer to the shares to be purchased by Towers Watson as the Class R shares. Under the terms of the merger agreement, the amount available to repurchase Class R shares will be at least $200 million, and may be increased if Watson Wyatt and Towers Perrin agree to do so.

Half of the purchase price for the Class R shares will be paid by Towers Watson in cash using a combination of cash on hand at both firms and by borrowing funds under a Towers Watson credit facility, if required. The balance of the purchase price will be paid in the form of a one-year note issued by Towers Watson, which will mature on the first business day following the first anniversary of the closing date.

on the company. To what extent have these costs already been reserved for in fiscal year 2010 accounts by retaining earnings? What impact will this likely have on bonus pool funding for future years? (NEW Added 22 October 2009)

We anticipate that the merger ultimately will result in approximately $80 million in pretax annual operational costs savings, primarily as a result of reductions in management headcount and general and administrative expenses, and full realization of these savings may take three years to achieve. This $80 million does not include other potential cost savings that may result from the merger, including expected savings resulting from the departure of certain Towers Perrin principals. We also expect Towers Watson will incur approximately $80 million in one-time severance and information technology integration costs associated with the merger and related integration activities, as well as other expected costs. These costs have not been reserved by either firm or by Towers Watson, and will be expensed by Towers Watson as incurred, although certain costs may be capitalized and amortized over future years. We expect that the bonus pool funding will not be affected by either the costs or savings arising from the merger.

7. Timing and Process

a. An affirmative shareholder vote obviously is critical to the merger's completion. Once the vote occurs and if it passes are we officially Towers Watson? Are there other things that need to happen first? (NEW Added 22 October 2009)

From this point forward, in order to complete the merger, several steps must successfully occur:

- The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) must complete its review of the S-4 document and declare the S-4 effective.
- After the S-4 is declared effective, we must send proxy materials, including information that is part of the S-4, to shareholders of both Towers Perrin and Watson Wyatt, which will instruct each shareholder how to indicate his/her vote on the merger agreement proposal.
- Each firm must hold a shareholder meeting, and the requisite affirmative vote to merge must be obtained from both firms shareholders.
- We must obtain antitrust clearance from the European Union.
- Other customary conditions to closing set forth in the merger agreement must be satisfied, such as the absence of any laws prohibiting the merger.
- We must complete certain filings with the states of Delaware and Pennsylvania to legally effect the merger.

When all of these requirements are successfully completed, we will become Towers Watson.
