Item 5. Other Events

On June 28, 2004, we announced that we had entered into a settlement with Agen Biomedical Ltd. resolving all ongoing litigation regarding Synbiotics' US heartworm patent and other contractual matters. The litigation, which began in September 2003, concerned alleged infringement of Synbiotics' United States Patent 4,789,631 for canine heartworm diagnostics and related supply contract issues. Neither party admitted any liability and both will make application to the respective courts to have their respective cases dismissed with prejudice.

Under the settlement agreement we granted Agen a license to our US heartworm patent in exchange for a license fee to be paid now and in June 2005. Further, Agen granted us a license to their European FIV patent and we granted Agen a license to use a Japanese trademark.

In addition, we will supply certain antibodies to Agen for use in the manufacture of specific test kits. Agen will pay us a transfer price for the antibodies and a percentage of sales for those test kits.
