An update on the Siebel transaction:

On September 12, Oracle and Siebel Systems announced the agreement to merge our two companies, consistent with our goal to provide customers the most comprehensive, competitive suite of enterprise applications. Together, we become the leading customer-centric software provider, combining the #1 CRM company and the leading Database, HRMS, and SCM company.

We have been working diligently over the past several months with Siebel to coordinate and plan for the merger so the integration is as seamless as possible for our employees, our customers, and our partners.

We have received all regulatory clearances in the U.S. and E.U. The last significant step in the merger process is to obtain Siebel stockholder approval, and Siebel has scheduled its stockholder meeting on January 31. In the E.U., the transaction is also subject to the information and consultation requirements of applicable E.U. Directives and their implementation in the individual member states. We hope to receive stockholder approval on January 31 and close the transaction shortly thereafter.
