Subject Company: First Citizens Bancorporation, Inc.

The following is a story posted to the First Citizens BancShares internal website:

Post-Merger Executive Leadership Team Announced

We believe the proposed merger with First Citizens Bank and Trust Company Inc. – we commonly refer to that bank as First Citizens Bank of South Carolina (FCB-SC) – will result in many advantages for our combined company, our associates and our customers. Two of them are the ability to leverage the existing teamwork between our banks and capitalize on each other’s strengths.

That includes taking advantage of the executive talent pool. “We are tapping the experience and knowledge of the top executives of both banks to create the consummate leadership team to guide our larger, stronger company into the future,” said Chairman Frank Holding.

He explained that working on our strategic plan and considering the proposed merger presented the ideal opportunity to re-evaluate our existing organizational structure and how it needs to evolve. “The planned merger will make us the largest family controlled bank in the nation and a premier banking franchise on the Eastern Seaboard,” Holding said. “This will require just the right leaders at the helm, and we are very fortunate to have such a strong cadre of executives to choose from.”

It should be no surprise that two companies with such similar cultures, values and business philosophies are managed by executives with comparable leadership strengths and styles. The current chairmen of each bank – Frank Holding and Jim Apple – have worked closely with other leaders to identify our future Executive Leadership Team (ELT), which we previously called executive management. The ELT will be comprised of executives from both banks.

The Executive Leadership Team and Organizational Structure

Six executives will make up the post-merger ELT. Two of them – Peter Bristow and Craig Nix – are currently FCB-SC executives.

Here is an org chart showing the six leaders, their titles and the functions they will oversee.

The post-merger ELT members will meet on a regular basis for transition planning. Goals include identifying their direct reports, which will be announced when finalized.

The six ELT leaders are working toward assuming their full roles at the close of the merger, with the exception of Nix. Glenn McCoy, our current CFO, will remain in his position until the third quarter regulatory filing is complete. After that, Nix will officially assume the CFO role and McCoy will retire.

FCB-SC's chairman, Jim Apple, will retire at the close of the planned merger.

During the Transition

“Flexibility” and “focus” are two important words for everyone at First Citizens during the months ahead. “We will do everything we can to make the upcoming transition as smooth as possible, but there will still be many changes to deal with,” Holding said. “A willingness to be flexible will help us all work through them. And it’s also critical to stay on track – business as usual must go on.” He encourages all associates to remain focused on satisfying our customers and pursuing our revenue generating initiatives and other business strategies.

“Thank you for all you’ve done to bring us to this exciting point in our history,” he continued. “Together, we are building a better bank and securing our future success.”
