ITEM 5. PAST CONTACTS, TRANSACTIONS, NEGOTIATIONS AND AGREEMENTS

(a) Transactions. In 1997, the Company sold in an arm's-length transaction to an Enron Corp. subsidiary, an unrelated third party, for $5.0 million in cash, 500,000 shares of $10 Series A Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock and a warrant to purchase at $0.002 per share an amount equal to 8% of the shares of common stock then outstanding and reserved for issuance, or approximately 925,771 shares.

During 1997 through 2000, as the Company encountered technical construction and operating difficulties respecting its Asphalt Ridge plant, leading to pre-operating cost overruns and continuing delays while its asphalt manufacturing and distribution business continued to experience disappointing results, the Series A Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock issued to an Enron subsidiary in 1997 continued to accrue dividends. In approximately June 2001, Enron advised the Company that Enron intended to dispose of the Series A Cumulative Preferred Stock and inquired of the Company's interest in purchasing or redeeming the preferred stock and advised the Company that it would also be approaching third parties about the possible sale of the securities. The Company and its management were, among other things, concerned that Enron might attempt to sell the securities to a third party to the detriment of the Company and its stockholders, and the Company and its management sought the financial means to repurchase the securities from Enron.

The Company did not have the financial resources with which to repurchase the preferred stock and warrants, even at a significant discount to the original purchase price of the securities. In addition, the Company was advised by outside legal counsel that, in view of the Company's financial position, Utah Law prohibited the Company from redeeming the preferred stock. Redemptions of stock are treated under Section 16-10a-640 of the Utah Revised Business Corporation Act as distributions to stockholders, so that the Series A Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock could not be redeemed if, after the redemption, the Company would be unable to pay its debts as they became due in the ordinary course of business (the equity insolvency test) or if the Company's total assets, based on their fair valuation as distinguished from book value, would be less than the sum of its total liabilities (the balance sheet test) as determined by the board of directors. UTAH CODE Ann. Section 16-10a-640(3). Upon review of these requirements and the status of the Company with its legal advisors and outside accountants, the board determined that the Company was, in any case, prohibited from acquiring the Enron securities under the foregoing statutory provisions.

Accordingly, the Company sought the financial participation of its principal stockholders and third-party investors. As a result, Jay Mealey and Andrew Buffmire, executive officers and directors of the Company, took the initiative with two others, Jeff Fishman and Alexander L. Searl, to organize Manhattan Goose, L.L.C., a Utah limited liability company, to negotiate the purchase of the Series A Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock, accumulated but unpaid dividends, warrant and associated rights from Enron. Manhattan Goose was owned by Jay Mealey, 32.5%; Andrew W. Buffmire, 32.5%; Jeff Fishman, 10.0%; and Alexander L. Searl, 25.0%.

Edgar Filing: CROWN ENERGY CORP - Form SC 13E3/A

As a condition precedent to completing the sale of the Company's securities to Manhattan Goose, Enron required that the Company formally waive its right of first refusal. Accordingly, on October 25, 2001, Jay Mealey and Andrew Buffmire advised the Company's board of directors of the circumstances and proposed terms of Manhattan Goose's proposed purchase of the securities from Enron, including advice that they owned interests in Manhattan Goose, the purchase of the preferred stock and the waiver of the Company's right of first refusal constituted a "directors' conflicting interest transaction," as defined by the Utah Revised Business Corporation Act, and they would not vote on the matter before the board since the third director represented the only "qualified director," as defined in the Utah corporate statute. Messrs. Mealey and Buffmire indicated that it was their opinion that the purchase of the preferred stock by Manhattan Goose was objectively fair to the Company since the result of the purchase would be that the preferred stock would be at least partially owned by management personnel who already controlled the Company, instead of an unaffiliated third party with no stake in the Company's success. The board also discussed the fact that, given the Company's financial condition at that time, the Company could not legally purchase the preferred stock because of Section 16-10-640 of the Utah Revised Business Corporation Act, which prohibits the redemption of stock if following the redemption, the liabilities of a corporation will exceed its assets.

Following a thorough discussion of the matter, Messrs. Mealey and Buffmire recused themselves from voting, and upon a motion duly made and recorded, the board formally waived the Company's right of first refusal to purchase the securities from Enron by the affirmative vote of the sole qualified director, James A. Middleton, who was then the chairman of the board of directors.

On November 1, 2001 (just one week before Enron publicly announced the restatement of prior period financial statements and certain related-party transactions at the beginning of its financial debacle), Manhattan Goose purchased from Enron for $263,000 the Series A Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock, accumulated dividends, 317,069 shares of common stock previously issued as a dividend payment, the warrant, and related rights. Manhattan Goose reported that each member of Manhattan Goose used personal funds to provide his pro rata share of this purchase price; the purchase by Manhattan Goose was for the purpose of making a financial investment in the Company; and as current officers and directors of the Company, Messrs. Mealey and Buffmire participated in the transaction in order to ensure that partial ownership of the preferred interest remain with persons involved with the Company, increase the amount of their equity stake in the Company, and make a financial investment in the Company.

On November 25, 2002, Jay Mealey used personal funds to purchase the Manhattan Goose membership interests held by Alexander Searl and Jeff Fishman for $78,900 and $31,560, respectively.

On November 26, 2002, Manhattan Goose distributed 4,585,806 shares of the Company's common stock to Andrew Buffmire in partial redemption of his ownership interest in Manhattan Goose. On November 27, 2002, Jay Mealey used personal funds to purchase the remaining membership interest in Manhattan Goose held by Mr. Buffmire for $102,570. Because of his 32.5% ownership interest in Manhattan Goose, this transaction represented the sale by Mr. Buffmire for $102,570 in cash and 4,585,806 shares of common stock of the equivalent ownership of 162,500 shares of Series A Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock with an aggregate liquidation preference of $1,625,000, plus accrued and unpaid dividends of $443,083, together with warrants to purchase 300,876 shares of common stock at $0.002 per share. Immediately after the foregoing transactions, Manhattan Goose dissolved and distributed 9,524,366 shares of the Company's common stock and 500,000 shares of the Company's Series A Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock and accumulated dividends receivable to Jay Mealey. Immediately thereafter, Mr. Mealey organized the Mealey Family Limited Partnership and conveyed to it all 9,524,366 shares of common stock and 500,000 shares of preferred stock, the warrant to purchase shares in the Company, accumulated dividends receivable, and all related rights in consideration of 100% ownership interest in the partnership. As a current officer and director of the Company, Mr. Mealey effected the foregoing transactions in order to ensure that ownership of the common and preferred stock remain with persons involved with the Company, increase the amount of his family's equity stake in the Company, and as a financial investment in the Company.

In partial payment of accrued and outstanding dividend obligations payable on the Series A Cumulative Convertible Preferred Stock, on February 28, 2002, the Company paid dividends of $200,000 in 13,793,103 shares of common stock to Manhattan Goose. On November 27, 2002, the Company paid dividends of $300,000 in cash to Manhattan Goose. On December 30, 2002, the Company paid dividends of $100,000 in cash to Mealey Family Limited Partnership. At December 31, 2003, and March 31, 2004, the Company owed $1.4 million and $1.5 million, respectively, in additional accumulated preferred stock dividends payable.

As a result of the termination of registration under Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, the Company's common stock would then no longer be eligible for quotation on the OTC Bulletin Board.
