Item 7.01 Regulation FD Disclosure

On February 11, 2009, Innovative Glass Corp. (IGC), a licensee of Research Frontiers Inc., announced in a press release the completion of the largest SPD-SmartGlass window installation in the world at the Indiana University Health Information and Translational Sciences Building using the latest generation SPD light-control film technology developed by Research Frontiers and produced by Hitachi Chemical Co., Ltd.

Edgar Filing: RESEARCH FRONTIERS INC - Form 8-K

SPD light-control film has the ability to have its tint level and light transmission characteristics infinitely adjusted from less than 1% to over 50% in a matter of seconds using a simple wall switch or remote control. In addition to manual control, it can also automatically adjust its darkness according to environmental conditions, thus maximizing the efficient use of daylight to conserve energy. Glass produced with SPD-SmartGlass film also blocks 99% of harmful UV rays entering the building.

This SPD-SmartGlass project took place over the span of three years and was implemented in two phases, using almost 800 square feet of SPD-Smart glass panels. The first part consisted of the installation of 59 interior panels that were used in the Legacy boardroom, classrooms and lecture hall. Innovative Glass provided variable tint controllers in the rooms for complete light regulation on demand. After the first interior phase was complete, Phase 2 was implemented, and nine large exterior panels were produced and fabricated as high performance 1-inch insulated glass units, which gave the glass exceptional characteristics, with a variable and dynamic light transmission range as well as sound-attenuating properties.
