we will benefit from Capex initiatives;

our qualitative assessment Hurricane Katrina's impact on our EPS guidance;

2005 estimates which assume an increase in Subsea Products results in the fourth quarter from Multiflex performance, a seasonal decline in ROV and Inspection contribution and lower Medusa Spar production;

2006 estimates which assume continuation of the industry trends, a significant increase in Subsea Products profits, a further improvement in ROV business and an escalation in Subsea Projects results;

estimates of the non-GAAP measures Cash Flow from Operations and EBITDA;

the possibility of accretive acquisitions;

our existing assets can earn more;

the possibility of organic growth;

our strong cash flow;

increased demand for our OIE division's Subsea Products;

continued umbilical market demand growth in 2006;

increased subsea completions;

plans to grow our ROV fleet size, either organically or through acquisition; improved ROV profit performance from anticipated larger fleet size, better average pricing, and fleet utilization improvement;

increased demand for deepwater inspection, maintenance and repair services; and higher diving contribution from hurricane repair work.

These forward-looking statements are based on our current information and expectations that involve a number of risks, uncertainties, and assumptions. Among the factors that could cause the actual results to differ materially from those indicated in the forward-looking statements are:

worldwide demand for oil and gas;

general economic and business conditions and industry trends;

the continued strength of the industry segments in which we are involved;

decisions about offshore developments to be made by oil and gas companies;

the highly competitive nature of our businesses;

our future financial performance, including availability, terms and deployment of capital;

the continued availability of qualified personnel; operating risks normally incident to offshore exploration, development and production operations;

rapid technological changes; and social, political and economic situations in foreign countries where we do business and the possibilities of war, other armed conflicts or terrorist attacks.

Should one or more of these risks or uncertainties materialize, or should the assumptions underlying the forward-looking statements prove incorrect, actual outcomes could vary materially from those indicated. For additional information regarding these and other factors that could cause our actual results to differ materially from those expressed in our forward-looking statements, see our filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission, including our most recent Annual Report on Form 10-K and Quarterly Report on Form 10-Q.
