Dear Brooks Automation Employee,

Today we announced very exciting news for Brooks Automation: the signing of a definitive agreement to acquire Helix Technology of Mansfield, Massachusetts. This important strategic business combination of two highly complementary companies will strengthen our position as a premier supplier of integrated automation systems for the semiconductor industry. By combining with Helix, we believe we will be able to better serve our current market, increase our addressable market, reduce the volatility that both businesses have historically faced and position us to enhance our financial performance. As a result, we will be well positioned to build greater value for our employees and stockholders as we leverage our combined products, technology, and global service and manufacturing expertise to meet the needs of our combined worldwide customer base.

Attached is a copy of the press release that was issued announcing the news.

By combining with Helix, we are creating a company with a market capitalization of more than $1.1 billion (based on the closing price of Brooks' stock on July 8, 2005) and trailing 12-month revenues of more than $720 million, making us the largest subsystems supplier in the semiconductor industry in terms of revenue. We believe this transaction will also open up new growth prospects and provide increased stability for the company.

Under the terms of the agreement, Helix stockholders will receive 1.11 shares of Brooks stock for each Helix share they currently own. There will be no change to the shareholdings of Brooks shareholders. The combined entity will continue to be known as Brooks Automation and our headquarters will remain in Chelmsford. Management of the combined company will include executives from both Brooks and Helix, with Brooks' CEO, myself, and CFO, Bob Woodbury, continuing in these current roles. As is customary, the transaction is subject to regulatory approvals and approval by stockholders of both Brooks and Helix, which we expect will occur by the calendar fourth quarter of 2005.

Many of you may recognize Helix as a market leader in highly specialized vacuum technology used in semiconductor and other vacuum-based processes. We view Helix's products and services as highly complementary and additive to our existing product offerings. Equally as important, Helix shares many of our core values and attributes such as operational excellence, technology leadership and outstanding customer service. By leveraging our strengths as a combined company, Brooks has a wonderful opportunity to improve our position as a premier supplier in the attractive growth segments of tool automation and to broaden our markets.

I strongly believe the new organization will be an exciting and satisfying place to work. It is important to note that the shared culture and strategic vision of both companies is critical to fully leverage the opportunities this combination presents and to implement the integration process as smoothly and with as few disruptions as we expect. With these goals in mind, we continue to value your contributions, and in return we will seek to ensure long-term career opportunities for you.

In the near-term, the necessary regulatory and shareholder approval processes must run their course. As a result, until we complete that process, we will continue to operate Brooks as if the transaction was not pending and continue to build upon the recent outstanding performance we have demonstrated to our customers and remain diligently focused on delivering to them world-class technology, quality and service. Throughout the coming months, we will keep you informed of the status of the transaction through various forms of communications, including site meetings with local and corporate management and frequent emails. As a reminder, please do not discuss the transaction with customers, suppliers, reporters or other outsiders unless you are specifically authorized to do so.

This is an exciting time for all of us. I am confident that working as a team with Helix, we will enter into a new growth phase for our company and will enjoy professional and personal success for many years to come.

Sincerely,

Edward C. Grady
